

WORLDLY-WISE AND UNSENTIMENTAL

Taking stock of a long life and a positive outlook on old age

HE HAS ENTHRALLED READERS WITH HIS COLUMNS in newspapers Welt am Sonntag and Bild for more than thirty years and his books became bestsellers. Now, to mark his 90th birthday, Peter Bachér wants to send out a very special message to his readers: life is still worth living even in old age. It has so much to offer and we should all use the time that is given to us consciously. But he also asks himself a question: Where can we find the strength to keep tackling new things and staying curious? This book is an affirmation of old age. It gives us the courage to regard the rest of our finite time as a good friend.

PETER BACHÉR was born in Rostock in 1927. He is the great-grandson of Theodor Storm, was the editor-in-chief of weekly newspaper Bild am Sonntag and editor of Hoerzu magazine. For more than thirty years, he wrote his column »It's Sunday Today« for Welt am Sonntag. Since 2014, Bild has published his weekly contributions under the title »Peter Bachér Reflects«. LangenMüller has previously published his bestsellers Love Every Moment, Live now! and All Cards on the Table.
